An expensive place to park

It's nearly impossible to find a place to park in London. And when you can find a place to park in this city, is it safe? It wasn't for Sue Daniels.

Sue Daniels works for a TV company in Camden in London. Yesterday morning she parked her car on a road that didn't have any parking meters on. Eleven hours later, when she returned to her car there was a parking meter next to it. She had a parking ticket and someone had clamped the wheels on her car, so she couldn't drive home.

'I couldn't believe it!' she said. 'I didn't know they planned to put parking meters on that road. There weren't any notices there about new parking meters. I had to pay £58 before I could drive home!'

However, she got her money back from the Parking Ticket Office in Camden, and they apologised. 'We don't usually start using the parking meters until next day,' said a man from the office. 'It was a mistake and we are sorry.'

Elephants

The elephant is the largest animal to walk on Earth. An elephant can carry a load of 1200 pounds. They eat 300 pounds of food a day. An elephant baby can weigh 200 pounds at birth. Elephants can live up to 70 years.

Elephants can be trained to carry logs with their trunks, and have been used in the forestry industry in Asia for many years.

Elephants use their ears as a cooling system. Blood flows through veins in the ears and as the elephant flaps his ears, the blood cools and flows through his body to cool off other parts.

Elephant feet are large and round. They distribute the large animal's weight effectively. In the past, elephants were killed and their feet were made into umbrella stands and small tables for tourists. Now elephants are protected by special laws.

There are two kinds of elephants: the African elephant and the Indian elephant. African elephants can be identified by the larger ears. The African elephant grows up to 10 feet tall and weighs as much as 12,000 pounds.

The greatest threat to elephants is the ivory trade. Most commercial ivory comes from elephant's tusks. From 1979 to 1989 was a bad time for African elephants. About 70,000 wild elephants were killed for ivory each year. In 1989 an international treaty limited the trade in ivory, decreasing the number of elephants killed, but elephants are still being killed for ivory. Please don't ever buy anything made from ivory! Plot That Could Have Destroyed Racing

A top racehorse was brought down at Royal Ascot with a shot from a high-tech sound gun, a court was told yesterday.

The gun was built into a pair of binoculars and fired from the crowd as the horse was in sight of certain victory.

The »technically brilliant« ultra-sonic device – which could not be heard by people – was devised by a back-street inventor. It was to be used with potentially devastating effect in a secret plan »to destroy the entire system of race-course betting and bookmaking in this country,« defence lawyer Johnatan Goldberg told Southwark Crown Court in London.

He said it had the potential to make a fortune in bets against the favourite because it made sure that the horse would lose.

It was used last year to unseat leading jockey Greville Starkey from Ile de Chypre just before the end of the King George V Handicap, which it undoubtedly would have won.
